Story of the Week...

$5 MILLION TO ELECT 83rd CONGRESS

Republican Candidates And National Committees Report Spending Three Times As Much As Democrats In 1952 Campaign For Election Of U.S. Senators, Representatives

A total of $5,584,688.59 was spent to elect the 83rd Congress, according to reports filed with the House and Senate which were totaled by Congressional Quarterly.

Of this outlay, the Republicans -- who took over control of both branches of Congress in the process--expended $4,080,989.79, or approximately three times as much as the Democrats with $1,302,245.58.

The figures cited represent all amounts reported to Congress by the candidates themselves, and by national committees working in their behalf. They do not include amounts spent on the Presidential campaign in 1952.

Only amounts compiled were those officially reported to Congress by those individuals and groups required to make reports. (The candidates and the national committees). Thus, although there is some undetermined amount of duplication in the over-all total figure, the actual monies spent on the 1952 Congressional campaign undoubtedly are far in excess of the $5.6 million total. State committees are not required to file reports nationally, and in addition millions of dollars are expended every campaign in unofficial ways which are not recorded in the states or with Congress.

MORE THAN IN 1948, LESS THAN 1950

The $5.6 million figure is only half as much as Congressional Quarterly determined was officially reported spent on the 1950 races for the House and Senate, when the outlay went slightly above $10 million. The candidates themselves spent somewhat similar amounts each year, but without a Presidential campaign on their hands, the national committees and organizations poured far more money into the Congressional elections in 1950.

The 1952 figure is considerably higher than the 1948 total, however, although again the reported spending by the candidates themselves is fairly close. The total for the latter year was approximately $4 million, according to CQ's compilations, although some of this amount overlapped into expenditures on the Presidential race in that year. (It was not possible to determine just how much, but the figure was close to a half million dollars, thus bringing the reported Congressional total down to about $3.5 million).

BREAKDOWN FOR $5.6 MILLION

Following is the breakdown of how the $5.6 million was spent in the 1952 races:

REPUBLICANS

Senate candidates	$ 453,778.35
House candidates	1,131,978.72
Senate campaign committee	781,558.02
House campaign committee	1,707,574.70
Labor groups	6,100.00
TOTAL	$4,080,989.79

DEMOCRATS

Senate candidates	$269,427.65
House candidates	768,718.68
Senate campaign committee	84,482.31
House campaign committee	19,000.00
Labor groups	160,616.94
TOTAL	$1,302,245.58

LABOR

Unspecified	$185,400.00
TOTAL	$185,400.00

MINOR PARTIES

House candidates	$16,053.22
TOTAL	$16,053.22
GRAND TOTAL	$5,584,688.59

In the above figures 66 Senatorial candidates are involved, fighting for 35 Senate seats, and 870 House candidates seeking the 435 seats and three posts as delegates. As shown above, the $5.6 million total includes $185,400 spent by labor groups for "unspecified" purposes and $16,053.22 spent by minor party House candidates.

These labor funds were allocated to state affiliates for "Senatorial candidates" and "Congressional candidates," according to the reports, without any indication of which party was beneficiary. Other labor funds, as shown, were allocated specifically, with the Democrats receiving by far the largest share.

TOTALS FOR 1950, 1948

In the 1950 race for seats in the 82nd Congress, 75 Senatorial candidates for 36 seats reported spending $915,475; Republicans $560,935; Democrats, $349,903. Eight hundred and eight candidates for 437 House seats (including two delegate seats) reported combined spending of $1,861,789: Republicans $961,815; Democrats $870,144.

In the 1948 race for seats in the 81st Congress, a Presidential election year, 48 Senatorial candidates for 33 seats reported spending $653,949.58, as compared with $723,206 spent by 66 candidates for 35 seats in the 1952 Senatorial campaign, also during a Presidential election year. Six hundred eighteen House candidates in 1948 reported total expenditures of $1,324,746, and 870 House candidates reported spending $1,916,750.62 in 1952.

COST OF SENATE SEAT

Senatorial seats have traditionally been at a premium, they being fewer and more sought after. The advantages the seats have are a longer term than other elective positions (six years as compared to two for House members) and a nebulous quality called prestige.

How much, then, does a Senatorial seat cost? The average candidate reported spending $10,957.57 in the 1952 general election (66 candidates reporting, divided $723,206, the total amount of expenditures reported). Only 16 of the 35 races reported expenditures high enough to rate a place among the top ten most expensive House races. Six of the campaigns cost more than the costliest race reported among the Congressmen ($33,106.02).

MOST EXPENSIVE SENATE RACES

The five most expensive Senate contests follow with the victors listed first. The amounts include special committees' reports when available.

1. Henry M. Jackson (D) v. Harry P. Cain (R) Wash. $137,382.49
2. H. Alexander Smith (R) v. Archibald S. Alexander (D) N.J. 63,119.16
3. J. Glenn Beall (R) v. George P. Mahoney (D) Md. 60,817.75
4. Michael Mansfield (D) v. Zales Ecton (R) Mont. 59,123.45
5. Harley M. Kilgore (D) v. Chapman Revercomb (R) W. Va. 44,001.64

Of the select group, Cain reported the highest spending, $77,109.46, and Mansfield the lowest, $1,240.58.

LEAST COSTLY SENATE RACES

Price Daniel (D Tex.) reported the lowest expenditures among the candidates. The general election cost him $3.01 ($1.33 for postage and $1.68 for stamps). Of the candidates that reported, eight said they did not spend a cent in the general elections. Five of the eight non-spenders won their races. They were William F. Knowland (R Calif.), J. Glenn Beall (R Md.), Charles E. Potter (R Mich.), Dwight Griswold (R Neb.) and John C. Stennis (D Miss.).

Republican candidates won 23 seats at a cost of $453,778.35, and Democratic contenders were winners in 12 contests and spent a total of $269,427.65.

COSTLY HOUSE RACES

In the ten costliest races for House seats 20 candidates reported to the Clerk of the House that they spent a combined total of $201,837.23. Here is the breakdown:

1. Small (R) v. Lankford (D) -- 5th District, Md.	$33,106.02
2. Magnuson (D) v. Canwell (R) -- At Large, Wash.	28,288.86
3. Devereux (R) v. Boone (D) -- 2nd District, Md.	22,769.83
4. O'Hara (D) v. Vail (R) -- 2nd District, Ill.	21,060.18
5. Eberharter (D) v. Denny (R) -- 28th District, Pa.	19,711.69
6. Bartlett (D) v. Reeve (R) -- delegate of Alaska	19,161.81
7. Hays (D) v. Wetzel (R) -- 18th District, Ohio	15,747.98
8. Yates (D) v. Siegrist (R) -- 9th District, Ill.	14,202.78
9. Kelley (D) v. McKenna (R) -- 21st District, Pa.	14,013.34
10. Metcalf (D) v. Rankin (R) -- 1st District, Mont.	13,756.74
TOTAL	$201,837.23

In six of the races incumbents were returned. They were Sidney Yates (D Ill.), Wayne Hays (D Ohio), E. L. Bartlett (D Alaska), Augustine B. Kelley (D Pa.), Herman P. Eberharter (D Pa.) and James Devereux (R Md.).

Two incumbents were defeated, Richard B. Vail (R Ill.) and Harmar Denny (R Pa.). Eberharter and Denny, both members of the 82nd Congress, were opponents in the 1952 election because of redistricting in Pennsylvania.

Devereux, with $18,265.96, reported the highest amount spent by the winners. Al Canwell (R Wash.), with a reported spending of $22,296.16, beat Devereux out by $4,030.20 for the highest spending title and, of course, was the highest spender to lose a race.

Not among the first ten, but close enough to it to merit attention, was the Southern Congressional race between winner Charles R. Jonas (R N.C.) and Hamilton C. Jones (D N.C.), the defeated incumbent.

Jonas reported spending $8,582.39, and Jones $3,751.35, for a total of $12,333.74.

Jonas' father, Charles A. Jonas, was the last Republican elected to Congress from the 10th District.

The occasion was the Southern revolt against Alfred E. Smith, 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate.

The elder Jonas served in the 71st Congress.

(NOTE: NO CONCLUSIONS SHOULD BE DRAWN AS TO APPARENT VIOLATION OF SPENDING LIMITS BY ANY INDIVIDUALS LISTED IN THIS REPORT. SEE EXPLANATION, PAGE 939.)

SENATE CANDIDATES' CONTRIBUTIONS, SPENDING

This is a state-by-state summation of reports filed with the Office of the Senate Secretary by candidates for Senate seats in the 1952 election. Write-in candidates are included only if they filed reports.

Of the 105 candidates, other than write-in candidates, 66 filed reports.

Some candidates reported that committees for their election handled all or part of their funds. In these and other cases reports apparently were made only to state officials and, in a few cases, to the Privileges and Elections Subcommittee of the Senate Rules and Administration Committee. Such filings were not available to CQ, so these totals are only partial ones.

Candidates and their election committees reported to the Senate Secretary total spending of $723,206.

Of this, Republicans spent $453,778.35.

And Democrats reported $269,427.65.

(Note: No conclusions should be drawn as to apparent violation of spending limits by any individuals listed in this report. See explanation, page 939.)

Senate Campaign Committees' Contributions

-- Plus Labor

The Republican and Democratic Campaign Committees of the Senate officially bore the brunt of party campaign costs in the various Senatorial races.

For the following listing Congressional Quarterly added together contributions which the campaign committees made to candidates, to committees working in their behalf and to official state organizations, to obtain the total contributed for election of the candidate.

Column 1 reflects total contributions by the Republican Campaign Committee of the Senate to candidates, committees working for the candidates and official state organizations, such as Republican State Central Committees. Column 2 shows the contributions by the Democratic Campaign Committee to candidates and groups.

Column 3 reflects contributions by 10 labor groups to be spent by or for the candidates. Where the contributions were made to state affiliates of the labor groups and were earmarked "Senatorial campaign contribution" CQ assumed the funds were to be spent by the state affiliates in the Senatorial race or races of that particular state. If there was no specific designation concerning the recipient of the contribution the sum is listed opposite the name of the state. Where the labor groups reported contributing directly to candidates, the sum is opposite the name of the candidate in column 3. (CQ noted only one reported contribution to a Republican Senatorial candidate -- Sen. William Langer (R N.D.).

Amounts in parentheses in column 3 are labor contributions for primary campaigns.

HOUSE CANDIDATES' CONTRIBUTIONS, SPENDING

Nine hundred and forty-two candidates were contenders for 435 House seats and three delegate positions in the 83rd Congress.

At least 853 of the candidates filed with the Clerk of the House some or all of the campaign spending and contribution reports required under the Federal Corrupt Practices Act. They reported total spending of $1.9 million, and a total contribution of $1.6 million. These totals were computed by Congressional Quarterly.

The list which follows contains total contributions and expenditures during the 1952 campaign of candidates who reported under the Act to the Clerk of the House.

For each Congressional district, the election winner is listed first. The chart includes all candidates except those who received write-in votes but did not report. Write-in candidates were listed if they filed a report.

Column 1 -- The first column of figures in the listings is of contributions, and includes all money given to the candidate's campaign which he reported to the House File clerk.

Column 2 -- All itemized spending as reported by the candidate is listed in this column.

Column 3 -- All unitemized spending as reported by the candidate is listed in this column.

Column 4 -- This column was compiled by Congressional Quarterly by adding the itemized and unitemized spending figures. In some cases, candidates entered the same figure in both columns, apparently intending to indicate that it represented their total spending. Congressional Quarterly did not add these identical figures but took the repeated figure as the candidate's total.

Under terms of the Act candidates are required to file preliminary reports (not less than 10 nor more than 15 days before elections) and final reports (within 30 days after elections). Unless state laws prescribe a smaller amount, they are restricted to itemized expenditures of $2,500 or the sum obtained by multiplying by three cents the total votes cast in the preceding general election, not exceeding $5,000. Major itemized expenditures usually were for billboards, newspaper advertising and radio and television broadcasting for which expenditures are limited under the Federal Corrupt Practices Act. Unitemized (and unlimited) expenditures include those for travel, paper, postage and distribution of letters and circulars, among others, and are specifically excluded from the spending limitations. (Note: No conclusions should be drawn as to apparent violation of spending limits by any individuals listed in this report. See explanation, page 939.)

State total spending and contributions are listed opposite the state's name.

Party symbols appearing after the names of candidates represent the following parties:

D -- Democratic
R -- Republican
P -- Progressive
Pro -- Prohibition
S -- Socialist
I -- Independent
ALP -- American Labor Party
DFL -- Democratic-Farm-Labor
L -- Liberal

House Campaign Committees' Contributions

-- Plus Labor

The National Republican Campaign Committee and the Democratic Congressional Committee (both of the House) are charged with helping Congressional candidates of their parties in elections and coordinating local and national campaigns. The help usually takes the form of contributions to the candidates and/or committees working in their behalf. The groups may, however, extend aid through contributions to official state organizations and by direct participation, through speakers and advertising.

For the following listing Congressional Quarterly included only contributions to the candidates and/or committees working for them. The total is listed opposite the name of the candidate.

The states, districts and names of candidates, with the Republicans following directly after the district numbers, are listed first. Column 1 shows combined total contributions by the National Republican Campaign Committee to candidates and their committees. Column 2 lists total contributions by the Democratic Congressional Committee to candidates and their committees.

Column 3 shows contributions by 10 labor groups to the candidates. Where the labor groups made "Congressional contributions" to be expended by a state affiliate, Congressional Quarterly assumed that such funds were to be spent in the Congressional races of the affiliate's state. In such cases the contributions are listed opposite the name of the states. Where contributions were specifically reported as to candidates, they are listed opposite the name of the candidates in Column 3. Labor contributed to the campaigns of five Republican candidates. They were all elected. They were Reps. Jacob K. Javits (N.Y.), Gardner R. Withrow (Wis.), Hugh Scott (Pa.), Homer D. Angell (Ore.), and John B. Bennett (Mich.).

Amounts in parentheses in column 3 are labor contributions for primary campaigns.

$1,000 Contributions To Campaign Committees

A campaign committee is in a position to carry the money load for a candidate, rush in reserve funds if the candidate's sources dry up or have given to the legal limit prior to election day, or concentrate on critical areas against selected opponents.

Money, of course, is a prerequisite to carrying out any or all of these functions. This makes the contributor important to the committee. Congressional Quarterly has culled committee reports for the names of contributors of $1,000 or more, those who play a big part in making the campaign committee wheels go around. They are reported in the listing which follows.

Contributions to the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, House Republican Campaign Committee and House Democratic Congressional Committee by individuals and groups are reported in that order. Contributors are grouped under the committee they aided according to the state from which they sent their contributions.

HIGHER FIGURES PROPOSED

Hennings and cosponsors Sens. Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) and Robert C. Hendrickson (R. N.J.) introduced a bill (S 2081) that would, among other things, increase the maximum amount that might be spent for Senate and House candidates from the present limitations of $25,000 and $5,000, respectively, in general elections, to $250,000 and $25,000, respectively, with the amounts applicable to primary and general elections separately.

The "realistic" spending limits provided in the bill would have restrictions not now present in the federal law.

Candidates would be required to include not only their own expenditures but also funds spent in their behalf by committees.

They would also have to report spending for personal items, travel, subsistence, stationery, printing and mailing, circular distribution and telephone and telegraph services.

STRICTER STATE LAWS PREVAIL

The accompanying chart includes legal limits applicable during the 1952 elections, calculated by Congressional Quarterly according to federal law, and state limits for general or special elections. Federal spending limits do not include costs for primaries. Where the state law is stricter, the federal law, by its own terms, gives way.

Eighteen states have laws to control campaign spending. Montana, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, West Virginia and Wisconsin have limits lower than the federal limits, but exemptions might permit large expenditures.

West Virginia, for example, limits spending to $75 for each county. The limit would permit Senatorial candidates to spend $3,925 during a campaign ($75 for each of 55 counties) while the candidates for the House office in the smallest district in the state (four counties) would be entitled to spend $300.

The West Virginia law, however, does not include expenditures for printed matter, radio broadcasting, advertisements, travel expenses, conveying voters to and from the polls or publishing information on political issues or candidates.

SEVERAL EXEMPTIONS PROVIDED

The federal law, in turn, exempts cost of travel, paper, postage, and writing or printing other than for use on billboards or in newspapers, distribution of letters, circulars, etc., telegraph or telephone services, primary election costs, spending by campaign committees working without the candidate's "knowledge or consent" and state and national committee spending in a candidate's campaign.

Expenditures for newspaper space, radio and TV time are not exempt under the federal law.

The federal law bases the spending limit on the total vote polled by all candidates for a given office in the most recent election.

METHOD USED FOR FIGURES

CQ used the following method to get the unofficial spending limits (there being no official limits available) shown in the chart starting on the next page: 1. The vote total in the 1950 election for each state and district was obtained; 2. CQ applied the formula of three cents a vote specified in the law.

"Previous vote" totals for districts created out of the reapportionment on the basis of the 1950 census--the law makes no provision for figuring the limits for new districts--were obtained by adding the previous vote in each county composing the new districts.

This was not possible for some 50 new urban districts which involved the shifting of parts of counties. With most of them, however, the vote probably would be fairly large, making the applicable spending limit at or near the maximum.

What Chart Shows

1. State laws applicable to general or special elections.
2. Congressional districts. In the 32 states where elections were held for full Senate terms, data for the Senatorial campaign limit is shown following the designation "full term". In three states where unexpired terms were at stake the information is entered after the designation "short term".
3. The total number of votes cast for the office in the 1950 election.
4. The spending limit for each office.

Spending limits for House candidates were $2,500 or an amount equal to three cents for each vote cast for all the House candidates in the district in the 1950 election up to $5,000.

Spending limits for Senatorial candidates were $10,000 or an amount equal to three cents for each vote cast in the 1950 election, up to $25,000.

Districts marked with asterisks were newly created. CQ estimated their "previous vote" total. Where new districts have the same boundaries as old districts, the old number is shown in parentheses.

(NOTE: NO CONCLUSIONS SHOULD BE DRAWN AS TO APPARENT VIOLATION OF SPENDING LIMITS BY ANY INDIVIDUALS LISTED IN THIS REPORT. SEE EXPLANATION, PAGE 939.)

COMPILATION PROBLEMS

The task of compiling the information on spending for the 1952 Congressional campaign, as tabulated in this issue, presented many difficulties for the staff of Congressional Quarterly. They included:

1. For many weeks, with the change in party control resulting in new officials in many offices, no reports were available for inspection.
2. The reports are extremely voluminous, making it necessary to read scores of pages of figures in many cases to obtain those needed for the various tables.
3. Many candidates filled out their reports improperly; some filed only a preliminary or only a final report; some gave the same figure for itemized and for unitemized expenditures, when it appeared they intended to report only one category; some put figures in the wrong places for proper totaling; some reports were difficult to decipher; some candidates put explanations for their totals on inside pages of their reports and neglected to mention the explanations where the totals appeared; etc.

In making the compilations, CQ attempted in every way possible to figure out what was intended by those filing the reports. When exceptions were noted or explanations made they have been included in the listings wherever possible. All totals have been double checked.

LEGAL SPENDING LIMITS

Because of the factors cited above, and for added reasons listed below, no conclusions should be drawn as to apparent violation of spending limits by individuals listed in the tabulations.

Candidates who may appear to have exceeded the legal limits probably have supplied incorrect information inadvertently, or not given complete information as to activities of committees in their behalf. Or it is possible that they noted such information in their reports, but did not place it with their totals and it was overlooked by CQ staff members checking the documents.

Before any judgment is made concerning possible excess of the legal limit a further study should be made of the individual report involved.

MISSING LINKS

Although the figures contained in CQ's tabulations represent the best obtainable summary of the reports filed with Congress on 1952 spending in the campaigns for the Senate and House, there still are items missing from the complete picture of what was reported spent.

Some individuals and groups filed reports only with states, and not with Congress; some others filed reports with Congressional committees, and these were not available for checking to see if they duplicated the reports filed with the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House or whether they contained additional figures.

ROLE OF LABOR

Ten labor organizations reported spending $352, 116.94 in House and Senate races in the 1952 campaign. The organizations and the amounts they spent follow:

Labor's League for Political Education	$171,700.00
Railway Labor's Political League	69,015.19
CIO Political Action Committee	53,550.00
International Ladies Garment Workers Union	18,385.00
Amalgamated Political Action Fund	14,412.00
Machinists Non-Partisan Political League	9,850.00
Trainmen's Political Education League	7,200.00
Textile Workers Union of American-Political Education Fund	6,325.00
United Automobile Workers, CIO	1,541.00
Blair City Labor's League for Political Education	138.75
TOTAL	$352,116.94

Twenty-one Senatorial candidates received financial aid directly from the labor groups, and eight were winners. One of the recipients was a Republican, William Langer of North Dakota. Other Senatorial candidates may have received aid through state groups which received funds from the parent organizations earmarked for "Senatorial campaigns."

Three labor-supported Democratic incumbents, Dennis Chavez (N.M.), Harley M. Kilgore (W.Va.) and John O. Pastore (R.I.) were returned to office along with Langer. Five Democratic incumbents were defeated. They were Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Wyo.), William Benton (Conn.), Blair Moody (Mich.), Ernest McFarland (Ariz.) and Thomas R. Underwood (Ky.). Four labor-backed Democrats replaced incumbent Republicans. They were Henry M. Jackson (Wash.), Mike Mansfield (Mont.), Stuart Symington (Mo.) and John F. Kennedy (Mass.).

The ten labor groups gave financial support directly to 80 House candidates, including five Republicans. They were Jacob K. Javits (N.Y.), Homer Angell (Ore.), John B. Bennett (Mich.), Hugh D. Scott (Pa.) and Gardner R. Withrow (Wis.).

Forty-two of the labor-supported candidates won their races, including the five Republican candidates who received labor aid. Eight members of the 82nd Congress (all Democrats) who received support were defeated. Nine of the successful labor-backed candidates were newly chosen Members of Congress.

SPENDING REPORTS LAW

Not since 1925 when the Act requiring reports on Congressional spending was passed has there been a word of praise from Congress concerning the effectiveness of the legislation in carrying out its avowed intention of controlling to some degree campaign expenditures and contributions.

During election years each primary starts a murmur of protest about the excessive expenditures in campaigns. By and shortly after each election the protests reach a peak--and shortly thereafter subside. A few Congressmen offer bills to tighten the federal laws and Congressional committees conduct investigations and recommend that they be changed.

Dr. James K. Pollock, political science professor at the University of Michigan, Dec. 3, 1952, told a House elections investigating committee that Congressional committees had been probing campaign expenditures and contributions for 30 years and "discouragingly enough one finds in their reports a constant repetition of the same ideas and recommendations that are never acted upon by Congress."

Pollock added he had acquired a "geologic sense of time" about remedial elections legislation -- geologic measures of time usually round the years off to the nearest million.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH LAW

What is wrong with the law as it stands? It has a number of obvious loopholes through which, as one political writer put it, one could "drive a four-horse team." Here are the major ones rounded up by CQ:

1. There is no federal legislation regulating primary or nominating convention costs. In a number of states preliminary expenditures exceed those for general elections.
2. Expenditures for travel, subsistence, stationery, postage, printing and personal services are specifically exempt from expenditure limitations under the present law. A candidate could conceivably carry on an expensive mail and whistle-stop campaign without exceeding the spending limits set by law.
3. There are no restrictions on the amounts spent by friends, official and unofficial political organizations, business associates and other interested groups. Here again large sums could be expended on behalf of a candidate and the record book would show nothing.
4. There are no restrictions or reports necessary as to the number of organizations supporting a particular candidate. Among other things, this permits a contributor to stay within the legal limit of one $5,000 contribution per group and still allows him to contribute as much as he likes or can afford to any one campaign.

What happens to the candidate whose expenditures, in the eyes of Congress, reflect an attempt to buy an office? The Senate has answered on three occasions, in one case seating the man under fire.

Truman H. Newberry (R Mich.) was elected to the Senate in 1918 after a disclosure that approximately $195,000 had been spent on behalf of his candidacy, especially in the primaries. The Michigan law limited primary spending to $3,750. Newberry's right to a seat was challenged in the Senate for corrupt and illegal practices in the primaries. After a protracted dispute in the courts and in the Senate he was seated, although a resolution was adopted saying "such expenditures" are "severely condemned and disapproved."

In 1926 Frank L. Smith (R Ill.) and William S. Vare (R Pa.) were elected to the Senate. More than $253,000 was alleged to have been spent on behalf of Smith's election and a Senate committee reported that $785,000 had been spent for Vare in the primaries. The Senate refused to seat either.
